This is a normal experience and you'll find it takes a while for your physiology to adapt to this new way of processing sound. We encourage our clients to experience and note how the hearing aid responds in a wide variety of circumstances, from crowded restaurants, classrooms and theaters to outdoor gatherings. During this period we encourage the user to try various adjustments to get used to how their aids and the remote control functions.

Starkey Hearing Foundation: Bringing the Gift of Hearing to the World

In 1967, Starkey Hearing Technologies Founder and CEO William F. Austin founded a hearing instrument repair service in St. Louis Park, Minnesota. Four years later, he acquired a small ear mold company called Starkey Laboratories, and merged his companies under the Starkey Laboratories name.

Austin's experience in hearing aid distribution and repair led him to create the concept of comprehensive hearing solutions. His focus on customer satisfaction and quality of life revolutionized the industry by setting a new standard for innovation and service. Since 1984, his Starkey Hearing Foundation has promoted hearing care awareness through support of research, education and charitable programs.
